"IRONSIDES" ON PARADE.

These men of a famous Cavalry regiment used to spring into the saddle; Now they show the same agility in getting into these new methods of transport. They're the Ironsides, part of Britain's answer to the mechanised divisions of Nazi Germany. Strongly armed and highly mobile, these units of our Home Defence can take everything in their stride. It's an easy matter for these Tankettes to leave the straight and narrow and speed across the rough countryside.

It's the charge of the Light Brigade with a difference.

HOME GUARD NAVY

Inspected by Rear Admiral Sir Basil Brooke, "B" Flotilla of the Home Guard Navy makes a fine display. To the men of the Upper Thames Defence, Sir Basil Brooke says -

(Speech)

125 Miles of the Thames are watched over by one thousand vigilant men of the U.T.P. All ^{are} experienced river men trained in musketry, and well versed in observation technique and night sailing.

The Upper Thames Patrol, like its big brother The Navy, never sleeps.
