

70/692-141800
S.541800

VICTIMS OF NAZI RUTHLESSNESS.

The sinking by a Nazi Torpedo Boat of the French Steamer MEKNES, while repatriating French sailors and marines, has added more men to General de Gaulle's forces. Survivors of this bestial attack find refuge in a British Port, and now need no further proof of the sort of security the Pétain Government can obtain from its masters. After a good meal and a rest, comes the dress parade, and even a hard boiled sailor can be shy on occasions.

They wanted to return to seek their families, to avoid victimisation, but they've learnt that the only Nazi to be trusted is a dead Nazi.

UP HOUSEWIVES AND AT 'EM.

The subject is salvage. Mr. Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, speaks to the women of Britain.