HOME GUARD AT SCHOOL.

Peace... and war are combined at this Osterley Park School where Guerilla tactics are taught to enthusiastic members of the Home Guard.

Germany subdued many countries by dropping armies from the skies - at night, and Home Guards must have the keenest sense of hearing to detect, and track down invaders.

Bombing from a narrow trench isn't so easy - - until the experts teach you how to make sure the enemy gets the worst of it.

Camouflage (that cunning art of warfare much used by the Nazis) must also be learned. Models help the pupils to create fake defences, designed to tempt an enemy to attack the wrong place..... lead him up the garden as it were.

If enemy troops or tanks ever appear on British roads, they'll have to be stopped. And here's a way it can be done - practised with the aid of some schoolboy cyclists representing the invaders. If they came round the corner too fast, they'd be liable to catch it where the chicken got the axe. And when tanks are held up... up they go!
