

2-F71800

40/63

CONVOYS AS USUAL.

Yes, Convoys as usual, despite the idiotic propaganda of the Nazis, and the hopelessly extravagant claims of the German and Italian High Commands. It takes more than hysterical screaming by Nazi and Fascist lie-mongers, to make an impression on the British Mercantile Marine. Land grabbing dictators will never know what it is to have a race of seamen such as ours. Incidentally, the National air RULE BRITANNIA is 200 years old this month.

Strongly guarded by units of the Royal Navy and Air Force, yet another five miles of shipping set out on a long sea voyage.

The Convoy may have dangers to face, but thank God the job is in the hands of British sailors. The seas may yet prove a tomb for the vile cancer of Nazidom.

5-F41800
40/63

The Navy leaves nothing to chance. Aboard a British Battleship they're practicing Gas drill. In the event of a gas attack, every man would carry out his duties whilst wearing a respirator. And there's not a thing they can't do in them, except eat and drink.

In the event of an attack with liquid gas, the men rid themselves of all contaminated clothing, but as a Pathe camera was aboard, essential garments had to stay put.

Decontamination Squads wearing protective clothing, go through the routine of ridding men and ship of all traces of the vicious lurking fluid.

The motto is "Be Prepared" as the Battleship's guns deliver a salvo of honest-to-goodness British steel.

2-FH800

60/63

OH EVRONS FOR MINESWEEPER.

The crew of a Trawler look up with pride at their ship's painter, as he adds one more chevron to the funnel. It's a big occasion for the boys, because for every so many mines destroyed, a mine-sweeper earns another chevron.

After the boys have had their celenration, they're going to think about putting up another funnel.

So fill 'em up and drink 'em down, and fill 'em up again.

S-74800
46/63-

SURVIVORS FROM MINED SHIP

Coming ashore after being rescued from their ship, which struck a mine and sank in the North Sea, 68 survivors (most of them Lascars) arrive at a Port on the East Coast. First thing is to equip them with new clothing and get them to a Canteen, where they can enjoy a rest and a square meal.

The second thing is another boat and a rude noise to Hitler.