ROYAL VISIT TO STEEL WORKS.

Steel works are going 'all out' to keep-up the supply required by the Forces. The King and Queen, anxious to see for themselves, make a tour in the noise and heat of the rolling-mills. There are no holidays for the workers here: Their main desire is that neither the Navy, the Army, nor the Air Force shall go short of essential metal.

The work people are grateful for the royal interest, and, it may be assumed, are working just a little bit harder in consequence.
