SUPPLIES FOR OUR ALLIES.

Allied Military Officers are making a close inspection of an Army Division in England. Belgian, Czech, Dutch, Norwegian and Polish Officers exhibit keen interest in a variety of ordnance, mechanised transports and armoured cars and tanks. An opportunity which affords them first hand knowledge of our men, methods and machines. Common equipment of our allied armies is essential for the joint effort of waging war against Nazi Germany.

Battle equipment of our fighting men also attracts close study. At an important inspection such as this, one hardly expects any sign of elation; but when the Czechs catch sight of the Bren guns, they feel right in their element - after all, they invented them. But it's the Norwegian Commander-in-Chief, General Fleischer, who gives a demonstration.
