THE KING VISITS FRENCH ARMY.

.....

The King is received by General de Gaulle as he arrives on a visit to a Camp of the French Foreign Legion in the Southern Command. Drawn up on the Parade Ground are representative units of the many detachments of the Free French Forces, under the command of General de Gaulle. For the first time in British history, a King of England is received by a Commander in Chief of French Forces on British soil. At the March Past His Majesty takes the salute of Warriors of the Foreign Legion, Alpine Troops and Marines, many of them campaigners of the Narvik Brigade. Equipped in British battle dress are French men who are rallying to the call to fight out the Battle for Freedom at the side of Britain. Vive La France.
