WRESTLING - THE HEAVYWEIGHTS.

...

Lights on large lumps of leather-lunged humanity struggling for a living. It's an old Japanese custom at a Tokyo Stadium, where the big fellows come to throw large parties.

"Mind those shorts, Kachimada!"

"Ehki" is matched with Who-Yung, another champion - but that's no fault of ours. Holdin' and ticklin' is all part of the game.....

"Hallo, where have we seen that face before?"

Aha, a feint, and he's down, but not out. The two are well matched, and both have long records and a nice collection of curses!

The big secret is sparring for the best position, and then you try to change the shape of the other bloke's face.

"In the spring a young wrestler's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of KUMI".....A grapple a day keeps the doctor away!
