ROOSEVELT RE-elected

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is again elected President of the United States of America over his Republican opponent Wendell Willkie, after a keenly fought and epoch-making election.

The Gazette brings you flash backs to the year 1932 when, in his first Presidential address, he uttered these prophetic words:

Then in 1936 he again won the country with another sweeping victory, polling the biggest vote in American history. This kept Roosevelt as head of the State for a further four years. A striking feature in this momentous 1940 election was the fact that the chief plank of both candidates was "aid for Britain". We may be assured that supplies of War Material from America will come in ever increasing quantities.

Tanks, guns, war ships, planes, guaranteed for Britain under the guiding, friendly hand of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.
