BUFFALO ROUND UP

In Wind Cave National Park, South Dakota, there's a herd of 300 buffalo and every year they have to answer to their names, so they round up the buffs for a roll call. The thundering herd brings back something of the romance of the wild west days with tough cowboys astride foaming broncos. But these are modern days and instead of a bronco it's an auto. After the buffs are checked up they are shipped to zoos and parks by special buffer-locomotives.
