

44/1

LONDON.

Then came the deliberate attempt to burn the city of London to the ground, by viciously calculated Arson. Never since the Great Fire of 1666 has such a roaring furnace swept through our Capital. The Luftwaffe clearly had orders to destroy the British Empire by burning out its heart. But in the second great fire of London our hearts beat stronger than ever. No words can describe the murderous inferno that blazes through London.

MUSIC UP.

Church

During this, the most ruthless, disbolical act of vandalism on our Capital, no less than nine churches were destroyed or damaged; three hospitals, and numerous historic buildings fell victims to the fire-bombs. The Fire Brigade and A.F.S. had the greatest test they are ever likely to have and came through with honours. Surely an incentive to others to join their ranks.

MUSIC UP.

Da

As a blood-red dawn heralds another day, the still burning skeletons cry out for vengeance. The Guildhall is now a burnt out shell completely gutted by the hungry flames. And amidst its ruins, we echo the cry of the people which greeted the Prime Minister when he visited the scene "We can take it - but give it 'em back !