THEIR MAJESTIES IN SHEFFIELD,

The King and Queen visit Sheffield to fulfil a promise made after the last bombing of the city. Amid the ruins of the ~~imbarxxdxxxx~~ humble homes Their Majesties are welcomed as if the occasion were a holiday. Every few yards, the Queen stops to talk to groups of people made homeless by the savagery of the Hun.

A friendly word to the women and children evokes the same reply - "We can take it" - but there's going to be a day of reckoning".
