CHICAGO CATTLE SHOW

Fine young cattle and even finer young cattle breeders come to the International Livestock Show. There are entries from 41 states and they represent the cream of the stockyards. One of the winning contributions is a half ton of meat bred by an Illinois farmerette. Star act of the show is a sheep round-up. It's the job of the dog to drive the flock into the pen and up to now the dog and the flock have been perfect strangers. Rover's technique is worth watching. Mutiny eh, no only a show of temper and in a moment they are all following like a flock of sheep. And when all's nice and tidy, look out there Rover, he always was an outsider. Come on Shep, we've got to get this job done. How's that eh!
