

AMERICAN PLANES ARRIVE.

A Lockheed machine similar to those which have flown the Atlantic lands at a British aerodrome. Out of it step American Volunteer and Canadian Pilots, some of the men who regularly fly the thousands of miles of ocean from America.

At a Ministry of Aircraft Production Station, huge packing cases containing smaller aircraft components are opened. These have been shipped from the States and are now being assembled in the workshops.

The Curtiss P.40 TOMAHAWK is a fighter aircraft which has already proved itself superior to anything the Jerries have got. Just a few of the tools which'll help us to finish the Job.
