THE QUEEN ELIZABETH IN TABLEBAY.

Dawn over Table Mountain heralds another triumph for the QUEEN ELIZABETH. With the official publication of the news that the world's largest and fastest liner crossed unescorted from New York to Cape Town, we present this exclusive Pathe camera-record of her arrival in Table Bay. As we gaze down from the air on the eighty-five-thousand ton mistress of the seas, we recall her historic maiden voyage made secretaly across the Atlantic, when the U-boat menace was at its worst. This latest trip is no less an achievement; although she travelled no where near top speed, she did New York to Trinidad in four days, and Trinidad to the Cape in 10 days.

Some idea of her tremendous proportions can be obtained from this picture. She has fourteen decks, and you can walk over twenty two miles without covering the same route twice. The Queen Elizabeth is a giant tribute to British Craftmanship, and this successful crossing once again proclaims our supremacy on the seas.
