

PUTTING THEM THROUGH THEIR PAGES.

Yes, Siree, Uncle Sam sure does get 'em up early. Show a leg you lazy b-boys. Its the start of a stypical day for American Army Rookies, and they greet the dawn almost like veterans. (Take that which way you like).

After only a few days in Khaki, they haven't lost much time in getting into their stride. A good long route-march is so bracing (said he, refraining from giving it the old Soldiers' name)... They learn how to foil surprise air attacks too.

Being a soldier has its compensations. For instance, there's Visitors Day. Boy, this is good. Nee they can say what they really think of the Sergeant Major! There are other forms of recreation of course!

Every night the boys put on a show. Song writers in the ranks write songs about the pleasures of army life, and their buddies sing them, in fact some even believe them!
