THEIR MAJESTIES IN SCOTLAND.

Travelling many miles during their tour of Scotland, Their Majesties pay a three hour visit to Aberdeen. The Queen is about to open the new bridge across the River Dee. Her Majesty will cut the ribbon with a pair of golden scissors for which, as they are presented to her, she exchanges a penny - thereby respecting an ancient superstition.

As the ribbon is cut, the Queen names the bridge "King George the Sixth".

The Royal Car is the first vehicle to drive across the new bridge.. a substantial addition to Scottish architecture. Yet, as we look with pride on a fine achievement, it is with profound revulsion that we see what Nazi bombers have again done to the London home of our King and Queen. In a recent raid, a salvo of bombs struck the Palace Forecourt demolishing the North Lodge.

With these pictures as a background, nothing is more gratifying than to report that the R.A.F. have since delivered "The heaviest attack yet made on Germany", bombing Bremen, Hamburg, and last, but not least, BERLIN. A fitting prelude to our Spring Offensive. It must be Hell to live in Hitler's Country!
