THEIR MAJESTIES VISIT TO CANADIANS.

Pipers of a Central Ontario Regiment are drawn up, as Their Majesties arrive on a visit to Canadian Troops stationed in the South of England. Anti-Tank Batteries and other units give demonstrations of the many phases of their training. Men from the land of the Maple Leaf now in the Motherland, still carry happy recollections of the Royal Tour of Canada before the War. Entering a Bren Gun Carrier bearing the inscription HELLS ANGELS, the King is taken for a half mile ride over rough heathland, an experience which His Majesty thoroughly enjoys.

It would be hard to find finer physical types than these men from the Dominion. With traditional warmheartedness they enthusiastically cheer their soldier King as only Canadians can.
