DOG-SLED RACE

They're all lined up for the dog sled race at Ashton, Idaho. It's the classic of canine events and always draws the crowds. They're off for the Silver Jubilee Trophy and as they streak over the snow memories of the old pioneer days come back to life. It was then that the dog teams were the only link between the lonely frontier outposts. Today home bred setters are proving every bit as fast and strong as Alaskan Huskies. They're specially trained to the work, and they love it. The champ is Everett Heman, he's driving a mixed team of stag hounds and setters, and if every dog has its day, this is it.
