BASEBALL MAKES ITS BOW

The first first-class baseball game of the season packs the stadium at Washington. It's between the Yankees and the Senators, and President Roosevelt prepares to throw in the ball. They're off. With a mighty swipe, ace player Joe Di Maggio knocks Dutch Leonard to the brink. The first run and the crowd seems to like it. The New Yorkers are leading and pitcher Roscoe rings up the double to bring the score to three against the Senators nil. Mr. Roosevelt sees the home team lose.
