

PATHE GAZETTE: 41/52. (DUBLIN)

BILLYCART DERBY

Nineteen years ago Jimmy Banks, brilliant Australian, created that mischievous young scamp "Ginger Mace". Ginger's never grown up, never will. And today, as a boyhood idol, he is still famous. For Sydney's charities Ginger stages a super Billycart Derby. Every conceivable billycart faces the start and almost every conceivable kind of kid. Thousands are there to cheer, there's not a Tiger Kelly in sight to spoil the fun. Looks like a case of doping. They're racing, and not a dead 'un among them. So numerous were the entrants, the event took all day to decide. Thirty thousand people line the track. Now it's the grand final of the all-in-the-kitchen-sink stakes. Noel Etherington in Flying Peter can't lose, must have touched ninety. What do you say, Noel?