

BRITISH CRUISER VISITS GAMBIA.

To Bathurst, Capital of Gambia, British West Africa, comes a cruiser of the Royal Navy. The Captain goes ashore to pay his respects to the Governor, Sir Thomas Thouthern, at Government House.

Gambia is a useful little British Protectorate, and lies just South of Dakar which we have heard a lot about lately. The people have some strange customs.

It's a good opportunity to take always welcome Fresh stores aboard the cruiser.

The traffic problems in Bathurst would give a British policeman a heart attack,.... see what I mean.

And so we leave sunny Gambia.... a jewel in the British crown!
