BIG FIRE IN JACKSONVILLE

Another mystery fire sweeps the waterfront at Jacksonville, Florida. Two piers of the Clyde-Mallery line go up in smoke and flames and a third pier packed with highly inflammable resin is in danger. Acrid smoke belches across the seabord as 800,000 dollars worth of good shipping property is destroyed. Coastguard boats tow smoking barges away from the danger zone in a great fight to limit the blaze. The liner "Seminol" escapes with her portside blistered by the heat, but it's a very close shave.
