MODEL PLANES

Hundreds of young pilots of tomorrow parade for the National Model Aeroplane Championships in Chicago. With wings well up, they come from every State in America. The cream of the midget plane designers. Spare parts, it looks as if there may be a few spare parts to spare. A pusher plane that took four months to build. And now they are warming up for the big event. Youthful ambition literally thrown to the wind and it's a grand flight. Of course, they can't all be happy landings. Yes, one is even radio-controlled. And it makes the best landing of them all. It wins the championship. These young experts are making sure that the future of America is safe, in the air.
