

PATHE GAZETTE: 41/65.

NEW ZEALAND FIGHTER SQUADRON IN ENGLAND

We are privileged to show you the grand fellows of a New Zealand fighter squadron who have come all the way from their homeland to help sweep the German Luftwaffe out of the sky. Here is first hand evidence that only fully trained men are engaged on the biggest job of all. These are no mean untried youths afraid to show their feelings because of a lurking Gestapo, they're seasoned fliers who believe in the cause. Each one determined to give the Motherland of his best. New Zealand like all other members of the British Commonwealth of Nations is sending her full quota of fliers and when the history of the great war comes to be written, she'll surely have place of honour in its pages. Anyway they go on one of those flips that have shaken the German Air Force to its landing gear. As they roar along, the thoughts of all true Britains go with them. The Motherland say thank you boys and thank you New Zealand.