THE QUEEN WITH THE QUEEN'S BAYS.

The Queen, as Colonel-in-Chief of the Queen's Bays (2nd Dragoon Guards) pays a visit to Her Regiment. Men of this historic unit of the British Army are drawn up for inspection, smartly contradicting their regimental nickname of "rusty buckles".

Her Majesty sees some of the tanks, which have long replaced the famous Bay horses which gave the regiment its name as far back as 1762. But as a mechanised unit, the Queen's Bays present an equally fine sight as they march past. Her Majesty is indeed proud of her Regiment.
