U.S.A. TROOPS IN ICELAND.

United States Marines build a village of Nissen huts in readiness for the main body of American troops. Hot baths are not a luxury in Iceland because by shovelling in bucket loads of soap there's always a plentiful supply of hot soapy water in the old geyser. As a matter of fact, the soap has an irritating effect on the geyser, causing it to blow. Hot spring village also takes in washing - it's all part of the service.

From tenders and launches, units of the American Army arrive from their transports at Reykjavik, to take up their duties of guarding the important island on the fringe of the ~~Arctic~~ Arctic Circle.

Men of a British regiment form a Guard of Honour, as General Bonesteel of the United States Army comes ashore. He is met by General Curtis the British G.O.

By the way, here are the types of food being eaten in American Army ~~circles~~ Circles.

Well, I don't know mind you, but they seem to have forgotten the chewing gum.
