ZOO WITHOUT BARS

A new zoo has been opened at San Francisco without bars around the enclosures of the animals. Now you can be a big game hunter without the risk of the big game joining in. The lions are as safe as if they were white mice. The kangaroos are showing off their table manners to the visitors, there's no bars so they have plenty to eat to make up. That's junior on the ground floor pretending he's not really hungry and of course the other juniors will spot him. Mr. Bear has his private ice box, that's half the battle and here's half the bottle. And does he know what to do with it. Gosh, what a thirst. They may have taken away the iron bars but milk bars seem to be doing pretty well.
