STEEPLECHASE

The American racing calendar in the Eastern States comes to a close with the famous United Hunt meet. The first fences take their toll. Here you have all the excitement of a Grand National without the sweepstake. Watch 'em come and watch 'em go. One over, two over and it's nearly all over with three and four. Maybe you often wonder how the rider and the horses fall without hurting themselves. These slow-motion pictures will show you, but don't try it until you have learnt to ride. The last race brings a big thrill when The Beak is leading Maclean at the last barrier, and there goes The Beak in a header that looks like curtains but neither horse nor rider gets a scratch. Now what do you know about that.
