NAVAL CADETS

It's a great day for the naval cadets of Annapolis. Today they graduate into the service with commissions. Naval Secretary Frank Knox delivers the address and as each cadet steps up he congratulates him. A strenuous course and a period of discipline has reaped a rich reward. Ensign Kydd is the son of famous Admiral Kydd and Secretary Knox has a special word for him. So the presentations and cheering go on, after all passing out is something to cheer about. Outside there's more excitement but this time it's kind of different. The girl friend is proud of him and doesn't she treasure the picture in uniform. Yes, it's a day for passing and petting and even if the cameraman's looking, who cares.
