

IN IRAN TODAY.

As the great TransIranian Railway runs through Teheran, we visit the Capital to see some of the British Tanks for Russia passing through on their way to the Eastern Front.

British and Indian Personnel, who constitute the maintenance and instructional crews, accompany the tanks for the purpose of teaching their future soviet occupants how to operate them.

In the modernistic Royal Palace we are privileged to see the young Queen Fawzia with her husband, the twenty two year old Shah of Iran.

Queen Fawzia, sister of King Farouk of Egypt, is the proud mother of a sturdy baby girl, the fifteen months old Princess Shnaz Pahlevi.

Queen Fawzia is probably the youngest queen in the world. It was comparatively recently that she and her sisters were resident for a time in England.
