AIRMEN OF THE FUTURE.

At Centres all over the country, young men of the Air Training Corps are studying hard to equip themselves for the time when they may graduate into the Royal Air Force. The pre-entry scheme for the Service now comes under the direction of Mr. W.W. Wakefield, M.P., former England Rugby Captain and R.F.C. Pilot of the last war, whom we see in conversation with the Duke of Hamilton, Commandant for Scotland.

Over a thousand Cadets of the Edinburgh Squadrons march through the City as, after more than twelve months of training, the A.T.C. celebrates a year of splendid work. These are the young brothers of the R.A.F. who soon will achieve their ambition and swell the ranks of "The men with Wings".
