KING AND QUEEN WITH THE R.A.F.

During a recent visit to an R.A.F. Bomber Station, the King and Queen inspect members of its personnel within the shadow of a giant Halifax, one of the biggest types of bombing planes in service in the world.

Members of a WAAF unit stationed at this aerodrome also have an opportunity of seeing the King and Queen at close quarters.

The chief display is given by Parachute Troops. A first hand description of their descent is given Their Majesties by Major Frost, who led the parachute raid on the Nazis Radiolocation Station at Bruneval, and by Wing-Commander Pickard, who commanded the carrying force of bombers in the same daring attack. Following the descent, the airborne troops are drawn up and the King and Queen meet the men who belong to this newest fighting service. Of our Paratroops it can truthfully be said that - "These men have "nerves to burn".

"MORE ACTION" DEMAND IN TRAFALGAR SQUARE.

Thirty thousand people jam Trafalgar Square London, in a "Speed up the War" demonstration. The cry is for offensive action. Giant portraits of five men who lead millions in the fight for freedom form a back cloth to a number of emphatic speakers. A key note of the meeting is continued and increased aid for Russia - a call which applies just as urgently today to China, Burma, India and Australia.

A Chinese Seaman, once a Guerilla fighter, and whose mother was burnt alive by the Japanese, adds his voice to the demand for more action. "Speed up the War" is the cry of those who want to see victory this year.
