SHELTER BABIES

Babies at an Australian Welfare Home are being taught to take everything in their stride, like their elders. The idea is to keep their little minds occupied and what's better than a slide for doing that. Come to Nanny. Babes and bedding go down the chute to the shelter. It's safer and quicker than having nurses run down stairs with them besides giving the kiddies a lot of fun. In their shelter cots the youngsters look as if they are on show. They do at least show how they respond withstanding treatment. Are they downhearted? No!
