U.S. TROOPS ON THE MOVE.

America is sending vast numbers of her Army men for active service overseas. New York harbour witnesses a mass embarkation of hundreds of her doughboys. A graphic example of the weight of men and arms being shipped to the war zones where they're needed most.

To what country are the soldiers bound. To one of those countries where the enemy axis is to be found. They'll announce their arrival with a big bang. One place on the globe where we know them to be in large numbers is Australia. Their arrival there is a great moment for the people of the Commonwealth who are still apprehensive of Jap invasion. One Digger with an Austerity complex about matches helps out with a light. The impressive display given by the new arrivals calls forth Australia's admiration, and the approval of her Defence Minister Mr. Forde.

General MacArthur looks upon these men as the means of launching a great offensive. The Commander-in-Chief Western Pacific area is actively engaged in forwarding plans for the fight with the gloves off.
