CENTURY OF FASHION.

At Port Elisabeth in South Africa, Lady Walton opens an exhibition of dolls which show the evolution of women's fashions for a century. From 1841 to the present day. It's all in the name of charity and all the dolls have been dressed by local ladies with an eye for detail. For their good work Lady Walton's committee have been presented with this silver casket. These miniature costumes represent six months patient work by clever fingers and the response from the public is as big as the dolls are small.
