HOLIDAYS AT HOME THIS YEAR.

It is vital that all transport is left free for the war effort, so we really must spend our holidays at home.... After all the same sun shines on your garden or local swimming pool as on the beach at Tiddley-push-on-Sea. There's an old saying that "A change is as good as a rest", but it's just as true to say "A rest is as good as a change". You needn't go far for most of the holiday pastimes you've enjoyed in the past. There's surely a river or lake fairly near home, tennis courts are everywhere, dancing on the lawn is being arranged by many local authorities, while bands play in most of the parks.

It's a good opportunity to catch up on the films you've missed, while red and line can bring big surprises.

How much nicer your garden or allotment will be after you and the family have spent extra time on it, and how much nicer that little drop of er - ginger pop will taste!

If you like an energetic holiday, how about a spot of cycling or hiking in pleasant company. What a chance to improve your golf handicap on the nearest course, or spend a lazy day watching cricket, with an alfresco tea to follow.

These few suggestions will surely show, that you can spend a happy holiday at home instead of impeding the war effort by using transport needed for serious purposes.
