SWEET BLOOMS

The July show of the Royal Horticultural Society is held in London. Great splashes of colour form themselves into a fleeting and fragrant ensemble. In spite of difficulties many flower enthusiasts are able to attend. Prominent in the display are masses of sweet peas. Prize blooms there are in plenty. A sight to gladden the eye of any gardener. For well over 100 years the Royal Horticultural Society have held frequent exhibitions, and despite the fact that vegetable plants are claiming most attention these days, the interest in flowers is still as keen.
