JAPS RAID PORT DARWIN.

The twenty seven Japanese bombers which raided Darwin were escorted by fifteen fighters. They rained bombs on the North Coast town, apparently annoyed at the failure of their attacks by sea. The battle of the Coral Sea badly upset their plans.... Oil storage tanks ablaze presented a difficult task to the fire-fighters.

Every Australian is determined that this further violation of the soil of his homeland shall be repaid time and time again until the Japs scream for mercy; and then, they'll get - Justice!

JAPS RAID PORT MORESBY.

Across the Coral Sea is Port Moresby, key base in New Guinea. Shipleads of war supplies are being unloaded in a hurry, for there is danger of Jap bombers here too. The cargo is safely ashore, when "duck for shelters" - it's the alarm! A big enemy force appears overhead and comes in to attack as the defending anti-aircraft guns go into action with all they've got. A rain of bombs falls ~~on~~ all round the unloaded ship - but not a single hit.

Through hell-like scenes such as this, supplies got through!
