

OUR RECORD HARVEST.

The good golden acres of home unfold beneath us as we look down on some of the abundant harvest which has sprung from 500,000 acres of one-time derelict fields, which have added their abundant yield to this year's record crop of corn.

The countryman will see in this something which may escape the townsmen. British Farmers have responded to the nation's call for food right nobly. But they will be the first to acknowledge greater power than theirs which has filled the barns and ricks to overflowing.

Our land has given us richly of its bounties. It behoves us all to use it thankfully and not abuse it thoughtlessly.
