U.S. CONVOY TO ALEUTIANS.

Now we're right among those one hundred and fifty Islands which make up the Aleutians. An American Convoy pushes out to sea bound for the Andreanof group; part of an operation directed against Jap held islands in the Archipelago.

The main base of American forces is at Dutch Harbour. The Japanese have a toe-hold in the area of Kiska. The American occupation of the Andreanof group brings the Japs within easy bombing range. The Japs never even spotted this military move, so well was it executed. In bleak weather and stormy waters the U.S. Forces make their unresisted landing.

A powerful force is brought ashore to turn this island base into a stronghold. All the equipment of a small army of occupation is transferred from landing craft to shore, as a new American outpost is established.

A stream of retribution may one day travel down this land-bridge of islands straight to the very backdoor of Japan. The United Nations are creeping up on the mainland of Nippon.
