

NEWSBRIEFS FROM NORTH AFRICA.

A pictorial "On Active Service" sent from North Africa.

American reinforcements arrive at Mers-el-Kebir, a Mediterranean port near Oran to supplement the strong U.S. force already in Algeria. Troops in occupation along the coast, find North Africa a good spot to be in.

And that goes for the new arrivals of British troops seen marching through Algiers.

A seaplane base in the Gulf of Arzeu was occupied by American troops with such speed, that aircraft and torpedoes were there for the taking.

Here's a camera flash showing how American soldiers and local civilians were soon on good terms.

Maybe you'd like to meet some American nurses who came along too.

A few moments to relax after wading ashore with the boys from their landing craft.

The Stars and Stripes fly over Fort Lyautey, a 300 year old Fortress North of Rabat, which took a terrific pounding and still looks 300 years old.

Now for some of the men whose names are news, General Doolittle the leader of the Tekye raiders is now Commander of the U.S. Air Forces in North Africa. Major-General Clark receives his third star at the hands of General Eisenhower, thus promoting him on the spot, to the rank of Lieutenant-General.

The General is second in command to General Eisenhower who tops this gallery of brilliant Americans

American reinforcements arriving in North Africa.

port near Oran to supplement the strong U.S. force already in Algeria. Troops in occupation along the coast, find North Africa a good spot to be in.

And that goes for the new arrivals of British troops seen marching through Algeria.

A seaplane base in the Gulf of Arzew was occupied by American troops with such speed, that aircraft and torpedoes were there for the taking.

Here's a camera flash showing how American soldiers and local civilians were soon on good terms.

Maybe you'd like to meet some American nurses who came along too.

A few moments to relax after wading ashore with the boys from their landing craft.

The Stars and Stripes fly over Fort Lyautey, a 300 year old

Fortress North of Rabat, which took a terrific pounding and still looks 300 years old.

Now for some of the men whose names are news. General Doolittle the leader of the Tokyo raiders is now Commander of the U.S. Air Forces in North Africa. Major-General Clark receives his third star at the hands of General Eisenhower, thus promoting him on the spot to the rank of