

WOMEN OF THE NAVY.

Celebrating the fourth anniversary of the revival of the Women's Royal Naval Service, fifteen hundred Women march in a ceremonial Parade. As the camera tracks over, we get a glimpse of the young Duke of Kent and Princess Alexandra standing beside the dais from which the Queen, as Commandant-in-Chief of the Service, takes the salute. With her are Commandant The Duchess of Kent, the First Lord of the Admiralty (Mr. Alexander), and Mrs. Loughton Mathews, Director of the Service.

Those of you who are seeing this splendid sight for the first time, will want to join the Londoners who were there in an expression of admiration for the Women's Royal Naval Service.