CLEARING UP IN TUNISIA.

Bomb disposal Officers tread warily as they approach a German bomb dump during clearing up operations in Tunisia. They step cautiously for fear of mines, and keep a sharp look out for trip wires which might blow the whole lot sky high. The Nazi is a crafty fox who delights in beehy traps.

About a hundred bombs in this lot and a string of similar dumps which reach all the way to Cape Bon. The Bomb Disposal Unit has a tricky job on its hands.

Our sustained bombing of Bizerta left many buildings in a dangerous condition. One of our first jobs on entering was to demolish these which menaced civilian safety. A demolition squad place charges of gun cotton in position, and the remains of the Oriental looking Bizerta railway station are about to be laid flat.

All change for Orzhet, Bagshot, Heckham, Cookham - I'm off!
