TITLE.: PUTTING THE CRYSTAL INTO PALACE.

Picture. : The Crystal Palace was originally built in Hyde Park in 1851 for an International Exhibition of Industry - and three years later was taken down and re-erected in its present position.

It is no easy task to renovate this mighty building of iron and glass. It takes three whole months to repaint the iron-work alone.

In their wooden cradles slung hundreds of feet up, workmen tackle the job, and in order to keep them going, paint is ordered in ten ton lots at a time.

A worse job than this is that of cleaning the miles of windows - a very painful task. In fact there are over half a million panes in it.

These men make light of their task, in spite of the risks they run.

Here's a striking "shot" taken from the inside of what might well make a perfectly wonderful moving picture studio.

The main Building of the Crystal Palace is nearly a third of a mile long.

TITLE.: AMERICA'S SANIHURST.

Picture.: When the eagerly awaited day arrives Cadets of the West Point Military Academy all dressed up in their very best picturesque uniforms, receive their commissions from the hands of Mr. Hurley, the War Secretary.

These fellows salute with their caps off - if you're thinking of joining our army - don't ever do that or you'll find trouble - with a capital T.

After commissions are bestowed the lucky 241 new officers take the oath.
