

2 110581
C-500581

TITLE.:- DID YOU KNOW.: ?

Picture.:- This terrace of houses looks innocent enough, doesn't it ?

Well number twenty-three is not a house at all ! Just take a look at the back of it - and see that it is merely a brick wall which has been camouflaged to look like a house in order to preserve the appearance of Leinster Gardens - whilst trains pass to and fro under the road.

If ever you should be asked for your address, don't give this one, the police are up to that dodge.

TITLE.:- TO AN ENGLISH GENTLEMAN.

Picture.:- Beneath the shadow of Cleopatra's Needle at Westminster has been erected a striking tribute to the memory of Lord Cheylesmore - philanthropist and soldier's friend.

This beautiful memorial was subscribed for by members of His Majesty's Forces and when His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught unveiled it, he referred to Lord Cheylesmore as a true friend and perfect English gentleman.

Having paid this glowing tribute to his dead friend His Royal Highness, than whom there is no more respected member of the Royal Family takes his departure.

In his anxiety not to miss saying "good bye" to any one of his well-wishers His Royal Highness fails to notice the step - however he quickly regains his composure and passes out of our picture.