

TITLE.:- EVE AFLOAT.

Picture.:- These girl students "man" the boats in very fine style.

This is the senior crew going out to the starting post for their annual race with the juniors.

-and here are the juniors leaving the boathouse, looking to be in good trim for the contest.

Here they go - the nearer crew making the better start, but the juniors soon get into their stride.

They are putting their backs into it - aren't they ?

Their time is quite good too - watch ! - In-Out - In-Out - In-Out - In-Out-----

Like in everything else, its experience that tells, for the juniors begin to weaken towards the end with the result that the senior girls win by a fair margin.

Though they're the seniors - you wouldn't call them old, would you ?

TITLE.:- VACATION AVIATION.

Picture.:- Here are the undergraduate members of the Squadron with their instructors.

One of the first things they learn is, how to handle the parachute.

Here is being demonstrated, that when the ring is pulled, a small pilot parachute is released dragging out the parachute itself.

In this instance, as the wind catches the parachute - the pupil has his work out out to keep his feet.

He is dragged along - and possibly it is not only the parachute that has the "wind up" - however he is quickly rescued from his predicament by fellow pupils.
