

(5) TITLE.:- FAIRIES IN THE PARK.

Picture.:- Old or young, we associate fairies with gardens.

Mr. Ivor Innes, the famous artist, has adorned the stump of an old oak tree in Kensington Gardens with carvings of little figures of fairies, elves and imps.

Children often pause in their play to inspect the figures which appear to have slipped from the pages of story books to delight the younger generation of to-day -- and yesterday -- and, who knows(?) -- possibly to-morrow.

This particular side of the tree represents a witches cave with elves on guard at the entrance.

(4) TITLE.:-R.100 IN CANADA

Picture.:- This is the mooring mast at St. Hubert Airport Montreal, ready to receive the gigantic visitor on her arrival.

With the dawn came the R.100 -- creating a new record by crossing the Atlantic in less than forty seven hours !

Here's a panoramic view of this monster of the air which carried forty-four souls on a non-stop trip of three-thousand-four hundred miles.

She encountered severe thunderstorms on the way, but the only damage she sustained was to her port fin, the fabric of which was torn.

The perilous task of effecting repairs was carried out in the air.

Here's a close-up of the damaged fin -- you can see the repaired section quite clearly.

Altogether the R.100 was in the air for seventy nine hours.

Here is the Honorable J.L. Ralston, Canada's Minister of National Defence, who lost no time in visiting the airship.

These jolly lads are some of the crew who longed for the voyage to end in order that they could have a smoke -- a luxury which was, naturally, banned during the flight.
