

(3). TITLE.:- SAGACITY.

Picture.:- There is no doubt about it, these sheep dogs are keen witted and wise. See this fine chap driving three Welsh mountain sheep up the hillside.

In this particular series of trials he has to drive them through a narrow opening in a false fence and he does it with very little effort.

He then has to drive them through a Maltese Cross of hurdles -- this he accomplishes with a magnificent display of intelligence.

Putting them safely in the final pen is easy.

(4). TITLE.:- A GRAND PARADE.

Picture.:- Czecho-Slovakia was originally part of the Austrian Empire, but came into being as an independent Central European state in consequence of the Great War.

These fifty thousand men make a grand sight as they march through the densely packed main streets of Prague, the capital.

It's not to be wondered at that the populace gave vent to their pride by giving the Legionaries a tumultous reception -- they're certainly fine looking fellows.

Mounted troops bring up the rear of this, the greatest post war parade -- which was seen by half a million people
