TITLE.:- ROLLING ALONG.

Picture.:- These lumbermen are quite expert at this rollicking sport.

This chap's not so bad -- but, oh ! he gets a soaking.

These two are running hard but do not get anywhere -- except in the water.

And another couple find that America is not so dry as it is said to be.

A free-for-all rough and tumble -- with the accent on the tumble!

Watch these two chaps in the foreground.

One is going to get a ducking -- I'm wrong, both do.

This isn't much of a sport for winter.

This is called "clearing the deck" -- over they go like nine-pins -- that's the stuff to give 'em. And then there were only --two--one--none !

TITLE.:-LIGHTING THE DARKNESS.

Picture.:- The burning question of what to do after nightfall at the seaside is answered brilliantly by Hastings.

A pyrotechnic display is always attractive and often amusing --

Although it would be far from funny having these two cats settling their differences on your tiles at night. A boot might turn their fight into flight.

Bright moments come and go as these pillars of fire illuminate the lake and those responsible for the brilliance.

This huge catherine wheel gives rise to pleasant reflections.

While a big firefall makes light of much that is gloomy.

The display closes with a tribute to His Majesty the King -- Long May He Reign.
